Many Flags and Decorations in Honor of Their Coming-The Details for the Parade and Features of To-Day's Exercises.

The turnfest of the fourth circuit of the North American Turnerbund is to begin at the State fair grounds to-day, and those who will take the trouble to go there this aftergoon, to-morrow and Monday will be given a clear idea of the Germans efficiency in gymnastic. It is not merely sport that leads to a national organization of Turners and an annual festival in each of the circuits. It is more in pursuance of the German principle, "A sound body and a sound mind." The visiting Turners began to arrive yesterday morning, and were quick to see that the city had prepared for them. The national colors were liberally displayed, and various other forms of decorations came in as tokens of welcome to the visitors. After reporting to the secretary, Mr. Oscar Pflumm, at the Social Turnverein Hall, most of the active Turners went at once to the fair ground, which is to be their place while the turnfest lasts. They found the Exposition hall handsomely decorated with flags, mottoes and festoons, and over a rostrum was a capopy arranged with no little artistic merit. The rostrum, lighted by transparencies bearing various German mottoes and festeries, occupies one end of the hall and the band-stand the other. The northwest corner has been reserved for the mess tables, and the sleeping apartments are on the second floor. The exhibition grounds received much commendation for the perfection of its arrangements. Prof. William Fleek, the director-general the fest, received flattering comiments from the judges and members of other circuits on the success attending his efforts. The open stand, the gymnastic apparatus, and the surrounding tents for the various officers give the place a very attractive appearance. The effect is not lost at night, owing to the flood of light that is east upon the

Last night there were four hundred Turners in the city from aboad, including hose from Memphis, Tenn.; Louisville and Covington, Ky.; Dayton, Columbus and Cincinnari, O., and Peoria, Quincy and Moline, Itl. They are fine-looking young men, showing the best results of their physical training in quick and steady step and graceful provement. Some of them reached the city during the afternoon, and when all were in except part of the Cincinnati delegation, which did not come until midnight, a social time was had at headquarters on Maryland street. After this they formed in line and, with the Moline band and a in line ard, with the Moline band and a Cincinnati drum corps at their head, marched to the fair grounds. They went along Virginia avenue to Washington street, to Meridian, north to Second, east to Delaware, north to Eighth, east to Alabama and then north again to the Exposition building. Each Turner wore a light grey uniform, and carried a Chinese lantern. Great crowds of people greeted them throughout the long march. Reaching the building nearly every Turner lost no time in seeking out a cot to which he had been assigned. All were worn with march and travel. The exercises of to-day march and travel. The exercises of to-day will be particularly trying, making rest all the more imperative. The other half of the Cincinnati delegation, however, arrived at midnight, and quiet did not prevail again for some time. All the active Turners ex-pected are here except the St. Louis dele-gation, which will reach the city early this morning. A parade will occur this morning, the column leaving the corner of Washington and Alabama streets at 10 o'clock in the following order.

First Division—Platoon of police, grand marshal and staff, Wollrath's St. Louis Band, drum corps, Cincinnati teachers of gymnastics, flags of different societies par-ticipating, first brigade of active Turners, Moline Band, group of flags, second brigade of active Turners.

Second Division-Meyer and Deery's Band, passive members of visiting societies, erman Veteran Association, Indianapolis Mænnerchor and Liederkranz, Harugari and Socialistic Singing Societies and Socialer Turnverein.

The march will be east on Washington to East street, countermarch on Washington west to Tennessee street, countermarch on Washington east to Pennsylvania street, north on Pennsylvania to Ohio street, west on Ohio to Meridian street, north on Meridian to North street, east on North street to Delaware street, north on Delaware to fair

Two salutes will be fired as a signal to tall in, and one for the column to move, by detail of the German Veterans' Association, which will also fire a continuous salute while the column is in motion. The officers of the day will be: Grand marshal, Louis Kern; chief of staff, F. Erdelmeyer; adjutants, J. L. Bieler and Jacob Scholl; buglers, Otto Pfafflin and R. Lieber; assistant marshals, Albert Gall, C. Brink, O. Pflumm, John Buehler, C. Bender, C. Vonnegut, jr., E. Schælkopf, John Klein, d. Schwarzer, H. Klasman, P. Deluse,

Following the parade the trial of col-lective exercises will take place at the fairgrounds, beginning at 11:30 o'clock. The individual contests will begin at 1 o'clock, and at 5 the calisthenic drill by two thousand school children, under direction of Miss Mueller, will occur. From 5:30 o'clock to 6 the exhibition of collective exercises with iron wands to accompanying music, will be given. In the evening there is to be a formal reception, at which Mayor Sullivan and Mr. H. Lieber will make addresses. The day's events will close with a concert by the St. Louis Vollrath's Band of forty pieces.

Notes of the Festival. The Memphis Turners brought with them s an offering from their society, a large number of magnolia blossoms, which were presented to ladies interested in the turner societies of this city.

The Dayton Turners are accompanied by eight young ladies, members of the Vorwarts. They are registered at English's

The special police at the fair grounds will be in charge of ex-Sergeant Buscher. He applied yesterday to Superintend-Colbert for a loan of the force, but received a curt refusal, with the information that special officers are not permitted to wear stars. This was reported to Mr. Lieber, who at once ordered badges made in the form of stars, bearing the words "Special police." The cost of the fest will reach nearly eight thousand dollars. Of this amount $2,500 has been raised by subscription, and the balance it is expected will be received from dues and the gates.

Mr. Herman Lieber and Mr. Armin Bohn, the latter president of the local Turnverein, with Messrs. Fleek and Pflumm, have given the fest active personal attention for several weeks. The credit of its success is largely due to them.

Among the representatives of the German press accompanying the delegations are John C. Meyers, of the St. Louis Westliche Post, and Hans von Hippel, of the Louisville Anzeiger. The Cincinnati Volksblatt is also represented.

The Indianapolis Turnverein gave an exhibition last night at their hall, corner of Ohio and Illinois streets, to which many of the visiting Turners were invited.

Dr. Hays's Confidence Abused. Dr. Franklin W. Hays reported to the detectives yesterday that he had been robbed the night before of $25, a mackintosh coat and a suit of clothes valued at $40. AFFAIRS OF THE NEW YORK LIFE.

State Examiner Investigating the Condition of the Big Insurance Company.

New York, June 19 .- Superintendent Pierce, of the State Insurance Department, having appointed Department Superintendent Michael D. Shannon to examine the affairs of the New York Life Insurance Company, Mr. Shannon practically took charge of the company's office yesterday. He will be assisted by a large clerical force, and the entire examination may cover a period of six months, and it may cost the company as much as $25,000, for, under the laws, the company has to pay for the examination. It is believed that Mr. Shannon will obtain the results in a few weeks. No one has questioned the solvency of the company and Col. William L. Strong, one of the trustees, said, yesterday, that he had examined the company's assets, and found the figure, $115,000,000, given in January, to be correct. The trushad the concurrence of President Beers, who sent a dispatch from Europe commend-ing their decision. A. H. Welch, the sec-ond vice-president of the company, said that the insurance department had been invited to make a searching investigation, and that it would have the fullest access possible to all its affairs. He could not tell how long a time the examination would consume, but he knew that it would be thorough, and that the company would be satisfied with the result. He did not know when President Beers would return home. None of the officers seem to think that President Beers will resign his office as president. But Colonel Strong said emphatically that the company would not al-low him to resign even if he desired to. More was heard from Julius Merzbacher yesterday, which shows that he has exeryesterday, which shows that he has exercised his peculiar talents in other fields.

M. J. Drucker, a leather merchant, was the victim in this case, and he gave these facts yesterday: Merzbacher was employed by Mr. Drucker, from 1867 to 1874, as confidential clerk and resident buyer. He sent Merzbacher to Paris and gave him an interest in the business, but had no partnership with him. Merzbacher indorsed papers for him, and drew on Mr. Drucker for purchases. Merzbacher "anticipated" on his profits in the business, and when Mr. Drucker attempted to get a settlement Drucker attempted to get a settlement Merzbacher failed to give it. Mr. Drucker summoned Merzbacher to this city, and he owned up that there was a shortage in his accounts. But he said that if he could have $4,000 he could extricate himself from his troubles and regain some of the money he had lost. Mr. Drucker advanced the $4,000, and that was the last he saw of Merzbacher, who fied to

Mr. Drucker went to Paris and had to pay out $150,000 to settle up Merzbacher's shortage, for which Merzbacher had rendered him responsible. This sum also in-cluded the $4,000 he advanced to Merz-bacher. Afterward, Merzbacher wrote from Havana to ascertain if Mr. Drucker would allow him to return if he made a part pay-ment to him on his debts. Mr. Drucker allowed him to return, but declined to say whether he had received any money from

At a special meeting of the board of trus-tees of the New York Life Insurance Company resolutions were adopted approving the request for an examination of the company, expressing undiminished confi-dence in the officers of the company and the belief that the charges made against the management of the affairs of the company are wholly unjusti-fiable. The board believes that an examination will only serve to place the company on a firmer basis in the respect and confi-dence of the community, and they therefore welcome the fullest and most searching investigation by the proper authorities.

AMERICAN HOMEOPATHISTS

Papers Read Before the Institute Yesterday-Editor Elected Corresponding Secretary.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 19 .- Dr. J. T. Talbott, of Boston, chairman of the American Institute of Homeopathy, opened this morning's session with a very interesting paper on "The Duties and Responsibilities of Homeopathic Colleges as Leaders in Medical Progress." Dr. Alex. Vilers, editor of the oldest homeopathic journal in existence, was elected corresponding secretary of the institute. Other papers were presented and discussed, this morning, by Drs. Sherman, Phillips, Runnels, Betts, Wood and Ostram.

At the afternoon session Dr. Chester G. Higbee, of St. Paul, and Dr. D. A. Mc-Laughlin, of Ann Arbor, Mich., read interesting papers on "Gynecological Surgery; When to Operate" and "Simile in Eye, Nose and Throat Diseases," respectively. Other important papers were read by Dr. Abnerton, of New York; Dr. Edward B. Hooker, of Hartford, Conn., and others. Dr. Hayes C. French, of San Francisco, scored several points in his essay on "Peints of Diagnosis of Muscular and Defective Eye Trouble." Several other papers prepared by Dr. French were by his own request referred to the committee on publication. The opening address to-morrow is to be by Dr. Charles Gatchell, of Ann Arbor.

REAL BAD WOMAN.

Charged with Horse-Stealing, Arson and Burning to Death a Weak-Minded Boy.

NEWBURG, N. Y., June 19 .- There is a girl in jail at Newburg who, if all the charges against her are true, is the incarnation of vicionsness and depravity. She is under arrest for horse-stealing, but will also be charged with arson and murder. Within three months she is said to have married an old farmer, burned down his house, mill and barn, roasted his weak-minded son to death in one of her fires, and wound up by running off with a Newburg livery team and surrey and trading them for other horses and a wagon. The girl was arrested in Newburg last night on a charge of grand larceny on complaint of Von Allen Whitbeck, a Broadway liveryman. She then gave the name of Jennie Williamson. In her ceil at the police station, last night, she acted wildly at times, and tore up her white apron and hosiery in what seemed to

LIFE ON CHINA'S BIG RIVER

A Stream That Has Many Points of Resemblance to the Muddy Missouri.

Race of People Whose Curiosity and Inquisitiveness Put the Yankees to Shame-Mission Work in the Flowery Kingdom.

Bishop Goodsell, in New York Christian Advocate

The Yangtse, in some respects, is like the Missouri. Flowing chiefly between alluvial banks, there is a wall of earth on either side from twenty feet in height to nothing when the river rises. Capricious in its behavor, it destroys and builds in about equal proportion. It carries western and central China down to enrich the coast. Below Shanghai a large and immensely fertile and populous island has risen from the river within the memory of the living. One hundred miles and more up the river it has made a promontory of Silver island. Fine gardens are now cultivated where the British men-of-war anchored in 1842, Now on one side, now on the other, this mighty stream builds and destroys. has no respect for homes, "temples or graves. I saw all falling in. The ship channel often rune within fifty feet of the clay wall, which at low water hems in the river; then crosses diagonally, and is as close to the other side. But, unlike the Missouri, the Yangtse has a deep channel for six hundred miles from the sea. The Czarowitz's ships passed up while we were at Kinkiang, which is five hundred miles from Shanghai. It is the avenue of a mightier commerce than the Mississippi ever knew. Far above steamer navigation the junks laboriously work their way through the grand gorges to Chungking and beyond, almost to the borders of Thibet. When the wind favors all sail is set; when shead the crew climbs the river bank and drags by a mast-head line the heavy craft against the current. Nothing but Chinese patience would ever be equal to that.

After leaving Nanking the mountains ocscenery becomes more picturesque. Our mission hospital and houses at Wuhu have a noble site, far better for a sanitarium than for work in the city, two miles distant. But this was the best point of approach obtainable at the time, and if it be a mistake, of which I am not convinced. I am thankful for the three days of delight and rest which the mistake gave me in the glorious outlook up and down the river, whose "going on forever" humbles and refreshes. Here I clambered down the rocks and talked by gesture with a patient fisherman whose little spread-net, hung from a bamboo derrick, was raised many times without even a twomeh momie to reward him. There, too, tried to make acquaintance with a water-buffalo, on whose back a child was riding. But having a calf she sniffed, snorted and half-plunged at me, and I retreated in good order. The next day, however, when her owner was leading her by the ring in her nose, my kodak caught the group, one of the most characteristic sights on the banks of the Yangtse. Good work is done here, both in our hospital and chapel, but larger results at Taiping-fu, near at hand, have rewarded our missionaries.

CHINESE CURIOSITY.

On the wharf-hulk at Wuhu my wife and I had our most oppressive experiences of Chinese curiosity, which is equal to anything ever dreamed of, and then needs multiplying by four to approximate the truth. We had to wait an hour for the steamer, A crowd of coolies formed around us, examining our clothes, commenting on my avoirdupois and stature with a freedom inconceivable to those who only know home ways. I opened my pocketbook, three men walked up and looked in. I took off my overcoat, too tired to investigate the pockets. Two immense Chinese coffins made a barricade behind which I placed my wife. As many as could sat or stood on the coffins to see what new thing the outside barbarians would think I never have had the fact that I am full-grown so impressed upon me as here. One man asked me: "What is your honorable age?" When I answered fifty, he said: "You must be a hundred years old." In his thought I had had all that time to grow. There is a curious no-tion prevalent here that some foreigners are a hundred years old when they are born. I tried to console myself that this is what he meant, but the facts were against me. He only meant that no man ought to be as ponderous as I am at my age, and I quite agree with him. As we had later on a cabin which opened on the Chinese corridor, friends lent us a screen to keep the Paul Prys away. But many holes were punched through that screen. They must see! That is everybody's right in China! The wharfmaster invited my wife to his room on the hulk. Instantly every window was darkened by the faces of men and women! Nor did they leave until we did. When the boat came in the din was frightful. One would think a pitched battle was in progress. Universal distrust leads every Chinamen to carry his whole outfit with him. And, as if their lives screamed, and fought to get on and off the boat at the same time and on the same plank. It is this which makes Chinese mobs a terror, and life in China without high walls impossible. No moment, no room, is unknown, and an outrage on public rights, except in the women's inner apartments. And with all this it is eyident that the thought of impertinence does not enter their heads. "What is be doing that he should hide himself?" is the feeling of the Chinaman who is not allowed to see you infant children, and six servants, were our only fellow-passengers in the saloon. They were Manchus, and not so exclusive as the Chinese whom they rule. My wife did not care to enter the saloon where men and women were alike smoking and drinking tea. But the wives sentjout the female servants to ask her to come in, and being in they examined her clothing from head to foot, tried on her hat, her coat, her gloves, and the women would have denuded her if, with mild peremptoriness and the cabinboy as interpreter, she had not convinced them that there was a limit to curiosity. But it was all well-meant. They offered to permit her the same liberty with them. After awhile they ceased to fear being devoured by me or having the evil eye cast on them, and so far as the old mandarin would let them, they investigated my hat, gloves and coat, and were evidentin a photograph of the young lady daughter whose finger-nails on the left hand, pro-tected by silver nail-protectors, were four and one half inches long, and whose back hair, arranged in some incomprehensible inches behind her head, and six inches each side-a fine development of hirsute horns Our mission met at Kinkiang, and we had very interesting session. Good progress has been made in numbers, and our edu-cational facilities largely extended. The brethren have, as is the case everywhere in China, the largest successes in the country work. The vices of the open ports and missionary work are mutually destructive. And this leads me to explain why so many travelers underrate missionary work.

They never see it. Entertained at the great establishment of the mercantile louses, conversing with young men whose lives are stained by gross sin, which, in one direction, is regarded as venial by many here, they gather impressions which are as meager as they are false. I have heard of one case of a writer who condemned missions, who was asked if he personally inspected their work. "No," he answered, but I have heard enough about them." Some of the steamer captains are notoriously unfriendly to mission work, and seem to take pleasure in unfriendly comment. Any one who understands the irreligious foreign life of China comprehends the strained relations between some of the members of the for-eign communities and missionaries in gen-

ENCOUNTER WITH A PRINCE. Our stay at Kinkiang was enlivened by the arrival of the Czarowitz and Prince George, of Greece, who called there with Seminary, Minnesota, and that of Master three ships to purchase some of the famous Kinkiang imperial porcelain, of which the Czar's son bought over $1,000 worth. The heir to the Russian throne stepped out from the boat clad in simple grey civilian's dress, in English rusect shoes, carrying a teawood cane carved by our boys in the Kiukiang Institute. His saite tried to buy a carved cabinet done by these same boys, which is a marvel of Chinese skill, but I had bought it the day before, and I am unable to see why my children are not as worthy possessors of it as this moderate young man, who has no business to be born to a wealth and power neither he nor his father ever earned. The Crown Prince of Russia asked for the saloon and first-class state-rooms of the river steamer, for which we had bought tickets, for the use of the Russian charge d'affairs and his suite, and the obsequious English company ordered the captain to put all the passengers on shore at Hankow, which was done. I had paid for my room and had a telegram from the agent at Han-kow that I could have a room, but was told when the steamer arrived at Kiukiang that was put at the disposal of the Prince, and was to act as tender to the fleet going down the river.

It was even said that the Prince was coming on board. Satisfied that this last was a ruse to get rid of the saloon passengers to accommodate the Russian charge, I determined to go on that steamer. The captain was very kind, but could do no better than give us a room unfurnished usually occupied by first-class Chinese. The brethren at Kiukiang furnished us with bedding, and as we were not to be snut out of the saloon unless the Prince came on, we were very comfortable. My conjecture proved correct. The room which would have been kept for the prince was occupied by the Charge, the other by his friends and their Chinese servants.

I could not have the room, as the saloen

The Prince did not appear, much to the disappointment of an English woman whose ambition seemed to be to be able to write that she had been on the same steamer with a prince. Our democratic sentiments were exacerbated by the above incident. But we reached Shanghai in safety after a close escape from a bad collision in the river, and had the literally unspeak-able privilege of anchoring in the midst of the cannonade which from Chinese, Russian and English war-vessels welcomed the in-significant sprig of Russian royalty to the mouth of the Shanghai river. But that night or two of endurance of opium smoke and Chinese curiosity in a Chinese cabin has deepened our love for a land where a President's wishes cannot impair the obligation of a contract.

WEALTHY BUT A TRAMP.

John Swain, Who Deserted His Family Years Ago, Discovered, Worth a Fortune.

RENSSELAER, Ind., June 19 .- A wealthy beggar was recently taken up at Millersburg, O., and confined in the county poorhouse. On his release he asked the superintendent to accompany him to Columbus, and there paid him for his accommodations. The man, whose name is John Swain, is over ninety years of age, and has the appearance of a tramp, but he has government bonds, cash and real estate worth from $75,000 to $100,000. His son, who is seventy - three years of age, is living in poverty in Jasper county. His name is Robert N. Swain, and three daughters of John Swain are living in Huntington county, Mrs. Sarah Jones, Mrs. Nancy Rickets and Mrs. Cynthia Crum. In 1843 John Swain was a fairly prosperous farmer living in Forsyth county, North Carolina, with a wife and nine children. He eloped with a young woman of the neighborhood, sixteen years of age, after selling all his property, leav-ing his wife and children destitute. The girl for a long time lived with him as his wife in Tennessee.

At the breaking out of the rebellion he enlisted in the rebel army, but in a short time deserted and entered the Union army. but it was not long until he left Uncle Sam's service also. After this he sold his property in Tennessee, and has since that time been travling from place to place through Ohio. In 1887 a guardian was appointed to look after his property in Franklin county, Ohio, but it was only a short time until the court came to the wise conclusion that John Swain had more business ability than his guardian, and removed the latter. His son and daughters have employed legal talent and will endeavor to bring the old man to Indiana and look after his physical welfare and wants while he lives.

Johnstown Will Spend $200,000 in an Effort to Make the City Safe from Floods.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., June 19.-For several months J. J. #### CLASS DAY AT HARVARD.

Seniors March to President Eliot's for Break fast-Other Commencements.

BOSTON, June 19 .- Nature frowned upon the celebration of class day at Harvard today. The morning broke cold and gray, but as the day advanced the sun made such gallant efforts to break through the bank of clouds that the hearts of the seniors. which had begun to despond, were considerably lightened, and the programme was strictly carried out. The first act of the senior class was the assembly in front of my hat, gloves and coat, and were evidently meditating my watch and pockets, when a growl from his excellency sent them scurping to their cabins. I have my revenge Peabody, D. D., after which the class proceeded to the residence of President Eliot and breakfasted, according to traditional custom. At 10:45 the seniors again assembled in front of Holworthy to march to Sanders Theater, where the literary part manner over a wire, frame, projected six of the day's exercise was held. The auditorium was crowded with the friends and relatives of the graduating class. After prayer by Rev. Dr. Peabody the oration of the day was delivered by Mr. Charles Wes-ley Willard, of Montpelier, Vt.

The class poem by Mr. Hugh McCullogh, of Howardsville, Va., had been looked forward to with great interest by a large part of the audience, and frequent bursts of laughter and applause showed that the witty points of the poem were fully appreciated.

The ivy orator, Mr. Arthur Boylston Nicholas, of Boston, was warmly greeted as he stepped forward to deliver the ivy ora-tion. His allusions to some of the promi-nent characteristics of '91 were very appropriate, and his hits at some of the members of the class were very bright and clever. The last number on the programme was the singing of the class ode, written by Mr. Sewall Carroll Brackett, of Jamaica Plain, to the tune of "Fair Harvard," by Taking It Coolly.

Marshall P. Wilder is never chary of his stories. Either they are inexhaustible or he doesn't fear that they will lose their edge by private repetition. Here is one that is a great go in London this season: "Two Yankee sailors strolled into a show in Guatemala, where a prestidigitateur was entertaining an audience. A parrot perched on the back of the bench where they sat. After every surprising feat one sailor would turn to the other with the remark: That was pretty good! I wonder what will come next? This was repeated till it will come next? This was repeated till it made the parrot tired. Presently one of them threw down a burning match with which he had lighted his pipe. It fell through a crack in the floor and into a powder-magazine. Biff! went the whole building, people and all, and nothing was left but a hole in the ground and the parrot, which was uninjured, though badly shaken up. The bird pulled itself together, straightened out its feathers, flapped its way to a heap of ruins and croaked: That was pretty good! I wonder what will come next?"

SKINS ON FIRE

With Itching, Burning, Bleeding Ecsemas Instantly relieved by Cutioura Remedies.

Our little son will be four years of age on the thinst. In May, 1885, he was attacked with a painful breaking out of the skin. We called he painful breaking out of the skin. We called he physician, who treated him for about four weeks. The child received little or no good from the treatment, as the breaking out, supposed by the physician to be hives in an aggregated form, became larger in blotches, and more and more distressing. We were frequently obliged to get up in the night and rub him with soda in water, strong liniments, etc. Finally we called other physicians, until no less than six had attempted to cure him, all alike failing, and the child steadily getting worse and worse, until about the 20th of last July, when we began to give him Cuticura Resolvent internally, and the Cuticura and Cuticura Soap externally, and by the last of August he was so nearly well that we gave him only one dose of the Resolvent about every second day for about ten days longer, and every second day for about ten days longer, and he has never been troubled since with the horrid malady. In all we used less than one half a bot-tle of Cuticura Resolvent, a little less than one box of Cuticura and only one cake of Cuticura
